1. An extensive discussion between [redacted] and Deputy Director of Training (Special) has clarified the effects of the forthcoming regulation governing Agency issuances on publications of the Office of Training. It was agreed that the course catalogue and announcements of courses are not regulatory in the sense intended in the draft regulation and that such information can continue to flow through channels already existing, though it may become appropriate at a later date, when the catalogue has assumed a more permanent form, to bring it within the Agency issuance system. As for educational materials, they can in general be handled as in the past on the grounds that they are primarily for the internal use of the Office of Training and that, when formal official use of such publication is required by other components of the Agency, the documents can be integrated into the Agency system under the provision set forth in the regulation. [redacted] is drafting a minor change in the regulation designed to take care of the essentially developmental nature of many writings, both in the Office of Training and elsewhere. One important publication the Office of Training hopes to develop as an Agency issuance is a catalogue of all training materials available in O/TN.

2. The Order of Battle Course, which was to have begun on 28 September, has been canceled for lack of students. Only one person was enrolled. During six preceding runnings of the course, a total of 76 students received the one-week training, and the question arises whether the need for such a course has now been satisfied. Since the recent discussions on enrollments, those for the other advanced specialized courses have been exceptionally good.

3. Seventeen of the members of the top staff of PP, including the Chief, PP, and almost all his principal assistants, will be conducted on a day's tour [redacted] on 1 October. The program for acquainting many senior DD/P personnel with facilities at [redacted] seems to be meeting with gratifying success.
